Older people without children

Conference or Workshop Item

How to cite:

© 2009 The Author

Version: Version of Record

Link(s) to article on publisher’s website:
http://www.crfr.ac.uk/reports/slpresentations/Jill Reynolds.pdf

Copyright and Moral Rights for the articles on this site are retained by the individual authors and/or other copyright owners. For more information on Open Research Online’s data policy on reuse of materials please consult the policies page.
Older people without children

Jill Reynolds Solo Living Seminar 26th Oct 2009
What do we know about the old and childless?

In my research for The Single Woman: a Discursive Investigation I found that participants without children often conflated ‘singleness’ and ‘childlessness’.

It’s only been for decades that we can’t assume single=childless

There’s relatively little work, either quantitative or qualitative that considers childless as a category in its own right
What I would like to do is:

• A qualitative longitudinal examination of the subjective experience of people aged 60+ who do not have children
• Explore, through interview transcripts, the discursive constitution of ageing and childlessness
Inclusive sample

- Couples – living apart or together
- Single people, divorced or widowed
- Re-interview selection from The Single Woman
- Heterosexual or homosexual
- ‘Lost’ children – death? include through divorce?
- Acquired ‘step-children’
The Oldest Generation

- Compare with Timescapes study of the oldest generation – people over 75 – sample found through kinship networks so only one person without children.
Areas to explore

• How do childless older people make sense of their lives?
• What markers of time are used?
• Are patterns of sense-making gendered?
• How are agency and choice worked with?
• What expectations or plans do they express?
• Differences or similarities in the talk of childless and the talk of those who have children?
• Annual routines used to maintain contact?