ANALYSIS

- Thematic analysis: inductive approach for coding the interviews has been followed using transcripts of the interviews.

- The transcripts were read and annotated using the 6-phase methodology by Braun and Clarke (2006)

- 5 themes with 23 codes

- Code “Certification, Professional development and access to HE” to understand: “Widening disabled learners’ participation to HE through the use of MOOCs”
RELEVANT QUOTES

“I did learn some things yeah because obviously, I did it before I started properly on my law course, so I learned quite a lot “

Disabled learners who are already participating in HE are using MOOCs to supplement their degree studies

“I think maybe FutureLearn should do well any of them they are going to do something about getting started with online learning “

A way to get started with online learning

” I found it very useful, and I know there's a lot of mature students with the Open University and a lot of the mature students who are good with technology / I think it should be like a little bit of compulsory unit or something before starting”

To gain preliminary knowledge on an HE topic before starting the formal university course
LIMITATIONS AND CONCLUSIONS

Limitations:
• A simple disability marker may not reflect diversity within the population.
• It should not be assumed that these results generalise to the whole of the disabled learner population.
• Including categories of disability will provide greater insight into differences within the population of disabled learners.
• Extensions to the analysis approach to include clustering of responses, and identification of correlations.

Conclusions:
• Disabled learners are particularly interested in taking up MOOCs, for personal interest, to determine if they can study at a higher educational level and to get flexibility and free education. They are less interested in the relevance of the MOOC to their work, or professional development.
• Disabled learners have previous experience in online courses that allows them to get university credit, which is related to their interest in studying at a higher educational level. They have less experience of participating in online courses for continuing professional development.
